

Conversational Turn-Taking

Today's Standard

1.SL.1b - Build on others' talk in conversations by responding to the comments of others through multiple exchanges.

Cues	Notes
What is conversational turn-taking?	Conversational turn-taking involves taking turns speaking and listening in a conversation.
Why is it important to build on others' talk?	Building on others' talk helps create meaningful and engaging conversations.
How can you respond to others in a conversation?	Responding can include asking questions, adding new information, or offering a different perspective.
What are common misconceptions about this standard?	Common misconceptions include thinking that responding means repeating and that agreement is always necessary.
How can you overcome these misconceptions?	Overcoming misconceptions involves teaching active listening, question-asking, and respectful disagreement.

Summary

Building on others' talk in conversations involves responding thoughtfully through questions, new information, or different perspectives. It is crucial for meaningful communication and social interaction.