

Combining Information from Texts

Today's Standard

4.RI.9 - Integrate information from two texts on the same topic in order to write or speak about the subject knowledgeably.

Cues	Notes
What does it mean to integrate information?	Integrating information means combining details from multiple texts to create a comprehensive understanding.
Why is integrating information important?	It is important because it enhances critical thinking and communication skills.
How can different viewpoints be combined?	Different viewpoints can be combined by identifying common themes or complementary facts.
What are common misconceptions about this standard?	Common misconceptions include thinking different viewpoints cannot be combined and summarizing texts separately instead of synthesizing information.

Summary

Integrating information from multiple texts is crucial for developing a comprehensive understanding of a topic. This process enhances critical thinking and communication skills by combining different viewpoints and synthesizing information into a cohesive summary or presentation.