Today I Learned

Today we learned about prepositions. Prepositions are words like 'during,' 'beyond,' and 'toward' that show relationships between other words in a sentence.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Some students might think prepositions are the same as conjunctions, but they are not. Others might think prepositions only tell us where something is, but they can also tell us when something happens or the direction something is going.

Quiz Me

- What is a preposition?
- Can you give an example of a preposition?
- What do prepositions show us?
- Is 'and' a preposition?
- Can prepositions tell us about time?

Help Me

Prepositions are words that help us understand where things are, when things happen, or the direction something is moving. For example, 'during' tells us when something happens, 'beyond' tells us where something is, and 'toward' tells us the direction something is moving.
