

Story Narrator Identification

Today's Standard

1.RL.6 - Identify who is telling the story at various points in a text.

Real-World Applications for this Standard

Reading picture books and identifying the narrator; Discussing who is telling the story during read-aloud sessions; Using puppets to act out different narrators in a story; Creating simple story maps that indicate the narrator at different points; Watching short animated stories and identifying the narrator

Today I Learned

Today, we learned about identifying the narrator in a story. The narrator is the person or character who tells the story. Knowing who the narrator is helps us understand the story better.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Sometimes, kids might think the narrator is the main character, but that's not always true. The narrator can be someone else telling the story. Another mistake is thinking the narrator is always the author, but the narrator can be a made-up character.

Quiz Me

- Who is telling the story?
- Is the narrator always the main character?
- Can the narrator be a character in the story?
- Is the narrator always the author?
- Why is it important to know who the narrator is?

Help Me

The narrator is the person or character who tells the story. When we read a story, we can look for clues to find out who the narrator is. This helps us understand the story better. For example, in a story about a dog, the narrator might be the dog or someone talking about the dog.
