

Collaborative Conversations

Today's Standard

2.SL.1b - Build on others' talk in conversations by linking their comments to the remarks of others.

Real-World Applications for this Standard

Classroom discussions; Group projects; Peer feedback sessions; Family dinner conversations; Book club meetings

Today I Learned

Today, we learned about how to build on others' talk in conversations. This means listening carefully to what others say and then adding our own ideas that connect to their comments.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Sometimes, kids think they only need to wait for their turn to speak, but they also need to listen and respond to others. Another tricky part is thinking they must always agree, but it's okay to share different ideas nicely.

- Why is it important to listen to others in a conversation?
- Can you give an example of linking your comment to what someone else said?
- Is it okay to disagree with someone in a conversation? How should you do it?
- What should you do before you speak in a conversation?

Help Me

Building on others' talk means listening to what they say and then adding your own ideas that connect to theirs. You can do this at home during family talks or when playing with friends.
