

Using Relative Pronouns and Adverbs

Today's Standard

4.L.1a - Use relative pronouns (who, whose, whom, which, that) and relative adverbs (where, when, why).

Real-World Applications for this Standard

Writing sentences that describe people using 'who' or 'whom'; Creating stories that include details about places using 'where'; Explaining events using 'when' and 'why'; Crafting sentences that specify objects using 'which' or 'that'.

Today I Learned

Today we learned how to use special words called relative pronouns and adverbs to make our sentences more detailed. Words like 'who', 'which', and 'where' help us add more information about people, places, and things.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Some kids might mix up these special words with other pronouns, like 'he' or 'she'. Others might put words like 'where' or 'when' in the wrong place in a sentence. We'll practice to get it right!

Quiz Me

- Can you tell me a sentence with the word 'who'?
- What word can we use instead of 'where'?
- Give me a sentence with 'which'.
- What does 'when' tell us in a sentence?
- Can you use 'why' in a sentence?

Help Me

We use words like 'who', 'which', and 'where' to give more details in our sentences. For example, 'The park where we play is fun.' This helps make our writing clearer and more interesting.
