Today I Learned

Today we learned about conjunctions, prepositions, and interjections. These are special words that help us make sentences more interesting and clear.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Sometimes kids mix up conjunctions, prepositions, and interjections. Also, they might think interjections always need an exclamation mark, but that's not true.

Quiz Me

- What is a conjunction?
- Can you give an example of a preposition?
- What does an interjection do?
- Can you use 'and' in a sentence?
- What punctuation can follow an interjection?

Help Me

Conjunctions, prepositions, and interjections help us make sentences better. For example, 'and' joins ideas, 'in' shows where something is, and 'wow' shows surprise. We use these words every day!
