

Organizing and Presenting Information

Today's Standard

5.W.2a - Introduce a topic clearly, provide a general observation and focus, and group related information logically; include formatting (e.g., headings), illustrations, and multimedia when useful to aiding comprehension.

Real-World Applications for this Standard

Writing a research report with headings and subheadings; Creating a multimedia presentation on a historical event; Developing an illustrated guide on a science topic; Crafting a blog post with images and embedded videos; Designing a brochure with formatted sections and illustrations

Today I Learned

Today, we learned how to introduce a topic clearly and organize information logically. We also learned to use pictures and videos to help understand the topic better.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Sometimes, kids think pictures and videos are just for fun, but they help us understand better. Also, putting all information in one paragraph can be confusing. Breaking it into sections makes it easier to read.

Quiz Me

- What should you do first when writing about a topic?
- Why is it important to use headings?
- How can pictures help in your writing?
- What is a paragraph?
- Why should we organize information?

Help Me

When writing, it's important to start with a clear topic. Use headings to organize information and add pictures or videos to make it easier to understand. For example, when writing about animals, use headings for each type of animal and add pictures to show what they look like.
