

Technology in Writing

Today's Standard

7.W.6 - Use technology, including the Internet, to produce and publish writing and link to and cite sources as well as to interact and collaborate with others, including linking to and citing sources.

Real-World Applications for this Standard

Creating a blog post and citing sources; Collaborating on a group project using Google Docs; Publishing a research paper online; Using social media for collaborative writing projects

Today I Learned

Today, we learned how to use technology to write and publish our work. We also learned how to find good information online and give credit to the people who wrote it.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Some kids think everything they see online is true, but that's not always right. We need to check if the information is good. Also, we should always give credit to others when we use their ideas.

Quiz Me

- What can we use to write and share our work online?
- Why is it important to check if information is true?
- What does it mean to cite a source?
- Why should we give credit to others when we use their ideas?
- Can we trust everything we read on the Internet?

Help Me

When we use the Internet to write, we need to make sure the information is true. We also need to say where we got our information from, so others know we didn't make it up. This helps everyone trust our work more.
