Writing a research paper over several weeks; Journaling daily or weekly; Composing a quick email or letter; Creating a blog post or article; Developing a script for a short video; Writing a book review or summary

Today I Learned

Today, I learned about writing regularly. This means writing often, sometimes over a long time, like weeks, and sometimes quickly, like in one day.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Some kids think writing fast means their work won't be good. But with planning, they can still do well. Others think long projects don't need regular checks, but checking often helps them stay on track.

- Why is it good to write often?
- How can planning help you write fast?
