

Narrative Conclusion Writing

Today's Standard

9-10.W.3e - Provide a conclusion that follows from and reflects on what is experienced, observed, or resolved over the course of the narrative.

Real-World Applications for this Standard

Writing a personal narrative about a significant life event; Crafting a short story with a reflective ending; Creating a blog post that summarizes and reflects on a recent experience; Developing a reflective essay for a school project

Today I Learned

Today, we learned how to write a good ending for a story. The ending should help us understand what happened and how the writer feels about it.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Sometimes, kids might think the ending should just repeat what happened in the story. Or, they might try to add new parts to the story at the end. Both of these ideas can make the ending confusing.

Quiz Me

- What should the end of a story do?
- Why is it important to think about what happened in the story?
- Should the ending add new parts to the story?
- What can help make a story ending better?
- What does a good story ending make us understand?

Help Me

A good story ending helps us understand what happened and how the writer feels. For example, if you wrote about a fun day at the park, the ending might talk about why that day was special to you. This helps people understand your story better.
