

Spoken Words to Written Letters

Today's Standard

K.RF.1b - Recognize that spoken words are represented in written language by specific sequences of letters.

Real-World Applications for this Standard

Reading simple words in storybooks; Writing their own name; Labeling objects in the classroom; Creating word cards for common items; Playing matching games with words and pictures

Today I Learned

Today I learned that spoken words are made up of letters in a specific order. This helps us read and write words correctly.

Common Stumbling Blocks

Some kids might think that letters can be in any order to make words. Others might not understand that the words they hear are the same as the ones they see written down.

Quiz Me

- What do letters make when they are put together?
- Can letters be in any order to make a word?
- What do we call the letters that make up a word?
- How do we know what a word says?
- Can you show me how to write a word?

Help Me

Words we speak are made up of letters in a specific order. This is important for reading and writing. For example, the word 'cat' has the letters C, A, and T in that order. If we change the order, it becomes a different word or doesn't make sense.
